Division of Insurance Releases Guide to Earthquake Coverage Efforts Support NV Earthquake Awareness and Preparedness Week

CARSON CITY, Nev. – The state of Nevada may be earthquake country, but what many people don't know is that standard commercial and homeowners' policies do not cover damages resulting from earthquakes and earth movement. That is why, in light of Nevada Earthquake Awareness and Preparedness Week (Feb. 22-26), Insurance Commissioner Scott Kipper is proud to announce the release of the Division of Insurance's "Earthquake Insurance Nevada Consumer's Guide."

"In addition to creating a plan to take care of loved ones in the event of an earthquake, consumers also should develop a plan for financial recovery – and consider their insurance needs," Commissioner Kipper said. "Our consumer's guide to earthquake insurance provides an excellent resource for those considering purchasing this type of coverage."

In addition to producing this guide, Commissioner Kipper supports the efforts of the Nevada Earthquake Safety Council in providing citizens with useful information about earthquakes and how to prepare for them. The Division of Insurance urges Nevadans to visit the Nevada Earthquake Safety Council's Web site (<http://www.unr.edu/earthquake/index.html>) and to also consider creating a home inventory – valuable information to have should a real disaster strike. Creating an inventory and storing it in a safe location away from home is one of the most basic -- and effective -- disaster preparedness steps consumers can take, and helps to save time and headaches when filing a claim following a disaster. More information on home inventories and disaster preparedness can be found in the Consumers area of the Division's Web site: <http://doi.nv.gov/consumer.aspx>, under the Consumer Alerts heading.

Consumers who need help understanding their policies, or who would like more information on earthquake insurance can contact the Division's Consumer Services Section in Carson City at (775) 687-4270 or in Las Vegas at (702) 486-4009.

EARTHQUAKE INSURANCE

NEVADA? EARTHQUAKE COUNTRY?

After Alaska and California, Nevada ranks third in the country for major earthquakes – those of magnitude 5.0 or higher. This makes Nevada one of the most active states for seismological activity.

The following maps display various faults that exist in Nevada. The first map¹ shows the slip rates of the faults in Nevada, while the second map² presents a comparison of active faults in Nevada and California.

Historical experience and seismic analyses strongly suggest that no area of Nevada is completely safe from earthquakes. United States Geological Survey estimates³ show that within the next 50 years the probability of an earthquake occurring within close vicinity of Las Vegas is 12 percent, Reno/Sparks is 67 percent, and Carson City is 70 percent.

² Source: United States Geological Survey (USGS)

³ Earthquake risk probability data obtained from the "2002 Earthquake Probability Mapping" of the United States Geological Survey: <http://eqint.cr.usgs.gov/eqprob/2002/index.php>

Still, it is important to remember that probabilities are not certainties, and the next earthquake in Nevada may strike in any place at any time. Wells, which was given a nine percent probability of a major earthquake occurring within the next 50 years experienced a magnitude-6.3 earthquake in 2008.

In other words, it is essential for all Nevadans to be adequately prepared for a seismic event.

WHY BUY EARTHQUAKE INSURANCE

Most commercial and homeowners' policies – including condominium, manufactured home, dwelling, and renters' policies – do not cover damages resulting from earthquakes and earth movement. However, several insurers in Nevada offer earthquake coverage as a special endorsement to an underlying policy at the request of the policyholder. The decision to obtain earthquake insurance for one's property is an individual one and should be based on your understanding and tolerance of the risks associated with not having earthquake coverage.

Earthquakes are an ever-present risk throughout Nevada and the Division of Insurance strongly encourages Nevadans to consider purchasing earthquake protection.

WHEN TO BUY EARTHQUAKE INSURANCE

Purchasing earthquake insurance before an earthquake happens is the best way to ensure that your structure and contents are adequately protected.

If a major earthquake results in significant losses, most insurance companies will declare a moratorium on issuing new earthquake insurance in the market affected by the seismic event. Typically, the duration of the moratorium is anywhere from 30 to 60 days. Such a moratorium often is lifted once the likelihood of damaging aftershocks has diminished.

WHAT WILL EARTHQUAKE INSURANCE COVER?

Most earthquake insurance policies define an earthquake as "shaking or trembling of the earth, caused by volcanic activity, tectonic processes or any other cause." Typically, an earthquake insurance policy or endorsement provides coverage for any earthquake related damages to the dwelling or personal property under this definition. Some policies also provide coverage for events directly related to earth movement and seismic shocks such as landslide, settlement, mudflow and the rising, sinking and contracting of earth if the damage is undeniably attributable to an earthquake. Most earthquake insurance policies treat earthquakes occurring within one 72-hour period as a single seismic event.

An earthquake policy or endorsement will help pay for repairs to your home or business if it is destroyed. Check your home or commercial insurance policy to see if damages caused by earthquake or earth movement are covered or excluded. This information is typically found in your policy generally in sections titled "Losses Insured" and "Losses Not Insured." If such damages are excluded, contact your insurer or insurance agent and ask about how to obtain earthquake coverage.

It is important to note that any damage to personal or commercial vehicles caused by an earthquake -- even if the vehicles are parked in a garage -- is not covered under a homeowners' or commercial building policy. The comprehensive coverage provision of your automobile policy, also listed as the "other than collision" provision in some contracts of insurance, generally provides coverage for damage to vehicles caused by earthquakes, subject to any applicable deductible.

HOW MUCH WILL EARTHQUAKE INSURANCE COST?

Earthquake insurance commonly carries a high deductible which is in the form of a percentage rather than a dollar value. The deductible may range from 5 to 25 percent of the structure's policy limit and is higher for locations that are considered a higher than average risk of earthquakes. The insurer is responsible for payment only for damages that exceed the deductible.

As an example, if a home is insured for $100,000 (Coverage A -- Dwelling) with an earthquake policy deductible of 10 percent, the homeowner will be responsible for the first $10,000 of damages with the insurance coverage paying for damages in excess of $10,000.

Not all policies are alike and the deductible may apply separately to the loss of contents, structure or unattached structures. The premiums for earthquake insurance can differ by location, likelihood of earthquakes, the insurance company, type of covered structure and the amount of deductible. Older homes are normally charged more for earthquake coverage than newer homes under the assumption that older homes tend to be built from less seismically resistant materials.

AFTER AN EARTHQUAKE

If your home, apartment or business has suffered damage from an earthquake, call the insurance company or agent who handles your earthquake insurance policy right away to file a claim. Even if you do not have earthquake insurance, file a claim with your homeowners' or commercial insurance company or agent right away. Additional living expenses or certain damages from fire and water due to burst gas and water pipes may be covered under the standard homeowners' or commercial insurance policies.

If an affected area is declared a federal major disaster, consumers may need written documentation of claim denials to receive certain kinds of assistance from state and federal agencies. However, in the event a claim that was originally denied is changed to an accepted claim at a later date, homeowners or business-owners are generally required to reimburse the financial assistance or funding received from the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) not to exceed their claim settlement.

SOME TIPS TO FACILITATE EARTHQUAKE CLAIMS SETTLEMENTS

- ✚ Before any disaster occurs, make sure to prepare a detailed inventory of your property. Take pictures and make video recordings where possible and try to save receipts of major items for documentation purposes. Having thorough written and visual records of your property in its pre-loss condition is likely to make it easier to demonstrate to your insurance company the nature and extent of the damage.
- ✚ If your property has been damaged as a result of an earthquake, do whatever is necessary to prevent further damage, including boarding up your home to prevent looting.
- ✚ Obtain estimates covering repairs to structural damage. Prepare an inventory of damaged personal items. Include a description of each item and its value. Attach bills, receipts and other documentation that substantiates your figures. In addition, keep careful records of any additional living expenses you incur if you have to find other accommodations while your house is being repaired.
- ✚ Once your insurance company has determined that your loss was covered, it probably will assign an adjuster to verify your claim and determine the amount of the loss. Most claims are settled promptly, but some may require investigation, often because of the extent of the loss or because the cause of loss is unclear.
- ✚ As with all types of insurance, the best advice is to understand your policy and be sure you have the proper coverage before an accident or disaster occurs. If you need help understanding what your policy covers, contact the Division of Insurance Consumer Services Section at (775) 687-4270 in Carson City or at (702) 486-4009 in Las Vegas.
